A political prisoner in Belarus shed light on the brutal prison system of the country, smuggling a handwritten note made of toilet paper. Katsiaryna Novikava, 38 years old and who was repeatedly beaten by the forces of security after she was arrested in June 2024 using only a t-shirt. She became one of the hundreds of people imprisoned in the country with 9.5 million governed by the authoritarian dictator Alexander Lukashenko.

"All who were in the office beat me. They hit me on the head", wrote Novikava, describing how she was beaten during the interrogation at various detention centers. The article was published on independent Belarusian media.

Belarus was hit by protests during the controversial re-election of Lukashenko, which occurred in the sixth term of the presidential government for a 6th term and the country was condemned as fraudulent. Since then the authorities have arrested more than 35,000 people - many of whom were tortured in custody - forcing them to flee the country with the names "extremists" by their own armed forces (locally).

Novikava, who participated in protests of the opposition, was sentenced to six years and six months in prison in January. She is accused of inciting hatred against the work of the employee in the Ministry of Internal Affairs of the EU.

The condition of Novikava's health worsened after she was beaten, she said she was not receiving the medical attention she needed.

"I fell from the top of my bed and my head hit a wooden shelf", wrote Novikava, adding that she was injured but received no treatment.

Although most political prisoners are kept in solitary confinement, Novikava said she was kept in the same cell as Marina Zolotava, the head of the largest independent online channel in the country.

"The letters almost never arrive. Even drawings are prohibited", added Novikava, who was also cited as one of the authors of the study and the publication on the official news site of The New York Times in 2024.

Viasna said that the messages of Novikava should be investigated by the Committee of the United Nations against Torture.

"The letter from Novikava sheds light on the catastrophic situation for political prisoners in Belarusian prisons", said Pavel Sapelka, from Viasna to Associated Press.

Political figures in Belarus, including Viktor Babaryka; Maria Kolesnikova and Mikola Statkevich were kept in such conditions.

Currently, there are 1,385 political prisoners in Belarus - including the Nobel Peace Prize laureate Ales Bialiatski - and at least six prisoners died in custody.

Human rights defenders are documenting torture and illegal treatment of prisoners in Belarus with such regularity that the EU "quickly turns into a black hole", said Sapelka.
