African leaders discussed antiterrorism solutions on the continent during a summit in security in Abuja, Nigeria, on Tuesday, as attacks on terrorists increased.

According to the African Centre for Studies and Research on Terrorism (ACSRT), Africa recorded an average of eight terrorism-related incidents, 44 deaths and 2024. The number included 7,000 civilians or 4,000 military deaths in attacks against the USA in the past year;

Nigeria's National Security Adviser and the meeting's organizer, Nuhu Ribadu, stressed the urgent need to combat terrorism in Africa. He highlighted the various threats represented by terrorist groups that emphasize the importance of integrated security strategies.

"These groups exploit local vulnerability and contribute to continuous instability, demanding integrated security strategies that combine military efforts", Ribadu said. For 15 years, Nigeria has fought against a series of violent attacks by insurgent groups that entrenched their strongholds in parts of the Sahel region in Africa and left thousands dead.

Nigeria's president, Bola Ahmed Tinubu (president of the West African regional bloc CEDEAO), called for the establishment and strengthening of a military standby force. This force, initially proposed as a response to the July 2024 coup in Niger, would act as a major obstacle to terrorist operations on a large scale", Ribadu said to Reuters.

Nonetheless, political instability in the Sahel region has hindered regional unity. Leaders of Burkina Faso, Mali and Niger were severely impacted by the insurgency that was absent from the summit and then faced sanctions for the coup.

During the summit, Togolese president Faure Gnassingbe stressed the need for cooperation between states and defense forces to effectively address security threats.

The two-day summit on terrorism, supported by the United Nations, also counted on the presence of the African Union Commission President Moussa Faki Mahamat.

"It is time to elaborate a Continental Strategic Plan to combat terrorism effectively across Africa", Faki said.

Tinubu and Faki also called on the international community to do more to support the fight against terrorism in Africa.

"We cannot understand why other parts of the world, coalitions to combat terrorism have been established and similar efforts are not being made in at least one of the five regions of Africa where destructive phenomena are devastating human lives. Why are our voices never heard?" Faki asked:
