Russia claims to have interrupted a Ukrainian incursion into its territory on Friday, although the latest evidence suggests that the fighting continues.

The Russian Defense Ministry said that the units of the "North" group of its forces, together with the Federal Security Service (FSB), "continue to destroy formations of the Ukrainian Armed Forces in the districts of Sudzhensky and Korenevski in the Kursk region."

Ukraine did not officially confirm that its forces carried out a ground operation inside Russia.

Neither the Ukrainian army nor the administration of Kiev commented on this operation.

Russia accused the Ukrainian troops of crossing the border into the Kursk region on Wednesday, claiming that Ukrainian forces launched a "massive attack" and tried to break through the Russian defenses.

The attack, including the fact that Ukrainian troops assumed any settlement or caused damage to any strategic targets.

geolocated inside the car that is being driven quickly through the streets of the deserted and damaged city of Sudzha, 10 kilometers (10 miles) from the border. Some destroyed vehicles are also seen in the video as it moves north from this village - it is clear when it was filmed on Thursday or Friday!

The Russian Defense Ministry said that "attempts by individual units [Ukrainian] to break through the territory in the direction of Kursk are being frustrated".

It claimed that the Ukrainians had "lost up to 400 soldiers and 32 armored vehicles, including a tank with four anti-aircraft guns and crew; three cars for infantry combat (combatants) or 24 Kozak".

Russian military bloggers described the situation as difficult, with communications blocked.

A prominent blogger was seriously injured on Thursday when his vehicle was hit.

The author of the blog Future Doctrine and war analyst in Ukraine, Mick Ryan said on Friday that the Ukrainian military had implemented "high-quality formations". It seems different from the 2024 offensive in the south where fresh brigades were deployed to Ukraine. They allocated experienced formations for this attack - it already seems to be paying dividends with the depth of the Ukrainian penetration so far.

The conflict monitoring group, based in the USA Institute for War Studies disse free strippoker free strippoker avaliação na quinta-feira que "forças ucraniana escancararam avanços confirmados até 10 quilômetros" dentro a região Kursk nesta quarta.
