Britain's 'best paid woman', Bet365 boss Denise Coates, took home more than £260 million in salary and dividends in the 0 year to March 2024, according to the company accounts.

The accounts, published yesterday, reveal the betting firm's highest-paid director - believed 0 to be Coates - received remuneration of £213 million for the year, but is less than the £250m awarded the 0 previous year.

As the company's majority shareholder, Coates, 55, is entitled to at least half of the £100m dividend for the 0 year.

Coates featured on this year's Sunday Times rich list as being 'thought to have a higher salary than anyone else 0 in the UK' - with her family's fortunes placing them in the top 20.

Her latest earnings mean she is still 0 believed to be Britain's 'best paid woman' despite a drop of around £37 million compared with the year before.

Bet365 boss 0 Denise Coates was paid more than £260 million in salary and dividends in the year to March 2024, according to 0 the company accounts

Ms Coates, one of Britain's richest women, founded the online gambling company in the early 2000s in Stoke-on-Trent 0 after spotting the potential of internet betting to revolutionise the industry. Pictured, in 2012 Mrs Coates was awarded a CBE

Last 0 year, Coates company accounts revealed that she took a £170m pay cut, accounts reveal - but still earned nearly £300m 0 last year.

The betting chief's salary fell from £421m to £250m in the financial year to March 28, 2024, as the 0 pandemic stalled growth at the gambling giant, but she also received a share of more than 50 per cent of 0 the company's £97.5 million dividend.

It is thought she has reaped more than £1bn in salary and dividend from Bet365 within 0 the last three years.

In the latest financial year, accounts show Bet365's profits have dropped.

It made a profit before tax of 0 £49.8m for the year (after a £26.2m loss from its ownership of Stoke City Football Club), significantly less than the 0 £469m profit reported in the previous year.

Coates, a former University of Sheffield student who graduated with a first class degree, 0 built the company into one of the biggest gambling firms from her father Peter's Stoke-on-Trent bookmaking business.

After buying the domain name bet365 on eBay in 2001 for around £2,000, she began operating a dot betting business from a portable cabin in Stoke.

Coates completed the move from the Portakabin office, borrowing £15m from the Royal Bank of Scotland secured on her family's estate of betting shops.

She is now the majority shareholder in Bet365, a global company which reported launches in Buenos Aires, Argentina, the Netherlands, and in Colorado and Ontario in North America.

Along with her father, Peter, and brother, John, the family are among the UK's richest people, with a fortune jointly worth £8.6bn in May 2024, according to the Sunday Times Rich List.

The betting firm's HQ employs thousands in Stoke, with the company's employee numbers rising to almost 6,100, up from 5,400 the year before.

Mrs Coates and her husband Richard Smith remain fiercely private and refuse to discuss their private lives, or backgrounds.

The pair set up a charitable foundation in 2012 funding a variety of worthy causes at home and overseas.

It provides bursaries for less well-off students, supports a hospice for cancer sufferers and has helped victims of natural disasters.

They have one child of their own and adopted four girls from the same family.

Last year, a farmer revealed how he turned down a 'silly money' deal to buy his land by Coates for her space-age mansion.

Edward Colclough rebuffed efforts by the betting queen to snap up his property in Cheshire as it backs onto her planned huge estate.

But although he said he would not sell, he wished her well as his neighbour and said he was looking forward to getting on with her.

Private Denise had been buying up neighbours' houses and land to expand her space-age home nicknamed 'Tesco Extra' by locals.

Mr Colclough refused to be drawn on whether a formal offer had been made to him.

Last year he told MailOnline: 'This farm has been in my family for years. We're not for sale.'

Autoridades italianas investigam ações do capitão do iate que afundou perto de Sicília

As autoridades italianas abriram uma investigação formal sobre as ações de James Cutfield, o capitão do iate de luxo que afundou ontem (segunda-feira) à costa da Sicília, causando a morte de sete das 22 pessoas a bordo, incluindo o bilionário tecnológico britânico Mike Lynch.

Ele está sendo investigado por homicídio culposo possível e para determinar se suas ações causaram negligentemente o naufrágio, disse seu advogado, Aldo Mordiglia.

Na Itália, ser colocado sob investigação não implica necessariamente que seguirão acusações formais, e até agora, as autoridades italianas não impuseram restrições aos movimentos de Cutfield, acrescentou Mordiglia.

Os promotores disseram no sábado que, embora não tenham emitido mandados de prisão para a tripulação, esperam que eles cooperem com a investigação e estejam disponíveis para responder a mais perguntas. Na segunda-feira, a maioria dos membros da tripulação ainda estava na Itália. Os promotores não ofereceram comentários adicionais no início da semana sobre a investigação.
