Bem-vindo a Hull: Josh Hull, o novo estreante do Teste da Inglaterra, está pronto?

No início desta partida final da série, a pergunta para o novo estreante de Teste da Inglaterra era:

you are ready for this? You are ready for the jump? You, Josh Hull, can withstand the white heat of the form purer. Embrace it. We are heading towards the sun here.

Luckily, the fact that both teams served before and after lunch on day 2 was something more proximate to a game of beer, or one of the compilations on YouTube that explain why people in Australia think that county cricket is basically something like a game of cheese or a game of straw.

Runs and field errors came and went. Some light-hearted antics signified that Chris Woakes bowling four spin off balls that cannot be bowled, repeat, cannot be bowled. Before that, England had lost six for 35 playing like drunkards in a weak online one-day match.

In the middle of this, Hull was bowled by Asitha Fernando, who is a full foot shorter than he is, hitting something that ended up at waist height, a rare example of a ball becoming small in your hands.

Watching this, you were hoping that a wicketkeeper would fall while invisible hands posted emojis of laughter and tears in the sky, or that Alastair Cook would appear and start imitating the bowler. Josh Hull? Welcome to the zone of death.

Hull shows nerves and skill

Luckily, Hull played the first part of the online one-day match well, entering the bowling at 2.28pm with Sri Lanka playing the 70-2, and showing nerves and heart and some small skill. It was a extraordinary moment in the online one-day match. Any fast bowler who enters the online one-day match with a Test team from England with so little to sustain it?

You could – and some will – call the selection of Hull a declaration of appreciation more than a declaration of intent to the cricket of the county. Choosing him is literally saying, there is nothing to be gained from this. We are going to choose a young man of 20 with 16 wickets in 62 online one-day matches because we like how he looks. How are you supposed to feel about this if you are a 27-year-old with a county record of hard penalties, winning matches every week, running with pain, dreaming of a bigger stage?

On the other hand, the elite sport is supposed to be implacable, a hierarchy not just of numbers, but of possibilities. And Hull is a selection of ingredients. This is a selection based on the online one-day match optics. It is about appearance, height, arms.

The bowlers can be constructed and moulded if the raw material is here. Hull's form is good. Even when he dropped a catch in the middle of the day, his hands were crocodile, there was a sense of yes, well, far away, shoes size 15, which is the time to play the online one-day match. The cricket in England likes things high. The feeling is, we will be well if we have things high. The things high are the weapons with which we will fight, and if we do not defeat Australia, at least we will respect (our things high).

Hull, a bet for the future

Of course, when England talks about Hull being "an investment" and a two-year project is what they really want to say is that we need a high bowler for the Ashes. With this in mind, they also want a left-hander because the numbers and the feelings say that left-handers in this clear and bright sky, pitches that rise, large green-blue fields, everything seems to work.

Left-handers who swing have taken 78 wickets at 18 in the last three Ashes series in Australia, or rather the two significant Mitches have. If this seems simplistic (Mitch Johnson in 2014 was a generational terror, left arm or not; Josh Hull has bowled just over 1,200 balls in first-class cricket) then sport often is simple. Simple works. And also, he can bowl. You could feel the necks craning as Hull took the ball after lunch. His run-up is exceptionally long. He seems to appear on the distant horizon like an iron man emerging from the sea. He runs in with his hands low and wrist cocked, not so much the perfectly balanced 6ft 7in sprinting style of Mitch Starc as a purposeful trundle, like a siege tower being wheeled into place.

His first ball was pitched up 82mph and whacked hard to cover. His second swung back in out of the hand. His fourth was belted through mid-off for four. But it looked good. There is a slinginess there. The front knee is braced. The bowling boots were agreeably grey and non-fancy. Its all very simple, feet straight, ball delivered from side on, looking behind the arm. Rod. Titch. Big Bird. Hullsy. Reinforced Steel. He looked good.

The fastest ball of Hull's spell was 85mph. There was movement in to the right-hander but nothing away. And two and half overs in the big moment arrived, a ball pitched up at 82mph, seam scrambled, perhaps an unintended cutter. Pathum Nissanka was drawn into a drive that he basically toed to extra cover, where Woakes took a fine diving catch.

England's players ran to Hull, like penguins swarming around a lighthouse.

Há certeza que haverá dias mais difíceis do que este por vir. Mas nenhum, talvez, onde tudo se sinta tão aberto e tão divertido.
