In a bipartisan majority on Sunday, the House of Representatives voted for a bill updating the TikTok ban that could result in zerozero bwin app being popular on social media facing total prohibition in the EU.

The approval of the updated version of the bill came after Maria Cantwell, chair of the Commerce Committee in the Senate (in the Parliament), asked zerozero bwin in March for the House to review the details of this project and now extends the period from six months to one year. In a statement released on Wednesday, Cantwell said: "As I have said, the extension of the ban period is necessary to ensure that there is enough time on the part of new buyers to make a transaction with clients". I support this legislation updated."

The updated TikTok bill comes as part of the House Republican package. House Speaker Mike Johnson adds external aid for Ukraine, Israel and Taiwan.

Critics of the popular social media app argue that ByteDance, based in China, can collect user data and censor content critical of the Chinese government. In March of this year, Avril Haines, director of national intelligence, warned zerozero bwin of a hearing at the House Intelligence Committee (National Intelligence) on the possibility of using TikTok to influence the 2024 US presidential elections.

"This bill protects Americans and especially children in the US from the malicious influence of Chinese propaganda on the TikTok app. This app is a spy balloon on the phones of Americans", said Michael McCaul, Republican representative from Texas (USA).

While this, TikTok has repeatedly said it does not share and will not share user data from the US with China. "TikTok is an independent platform? with zerozero bwin's own leadership team - including a CEO based in Singapore (USA), COOs in the United States or global head of trust in Ireland", she said to Reuters. In response to the House vote at the start of this week, TikTok said: "It is lamentable that the House of Representatives is using the disguise of important external and humanitarian aid to once again block a bill that would strip rights from 170 million Americans."

In March, Joe Biden promised to sign the TikTok bill saying: "If they pass it, I will sign it". In the same month, Shou Zi Chew testified before Congress for more than five hours during which the lawmakers grilled the CEO of China's zerozero bwin Singapore, the TikTok app and drugs for the mental health of adolescents.
