Variants of the betting card game

Stud poker is any of a number of poker variants in which each player receives 2 a mix of face-down and face-up cards dealt in multiple betting rounds. Stud games are also typically non-positional games, meaning 2 that the player who bets first on each round may change from round to round (it is usually the player 2 whose face-up cards make the best hand for the game being played). The cards dealt face down to each individual 2 player are called hole cards, which gave rise to the common English expression ace in the hole for any hidden 2 advantage.

History [edit

Stud poker variants using four cards were popular as of the American Revolutionary War. Five-card stud first 2 appeared during the American Civil War when the game was much played among soldiers on both sides, and became very 2 popular. Later, seven-card stud became more common, both in casinos and in home games.[1] These two games form the basis 2 of most modern stud poker variations.

Play [edit]

The number of betting rounds in a game influences how well the 2 game plays with different betting structures. Games with four or fewer betting rounds, such as five-card stud and Mississippi stud, 2 play well with any structure, and are especially well suited to no limit and pot limit play.

Games with more 2 betting rounds are more suited to fixed limit or spread limit. It is common (and recommended) for later betting rounds 2 to have higher limits than earlier ones. For example, a "$5/$10 Seven-card Stud" game in a Nevada casino allowsR$5 bets 2 for the first two rounds andR$10 bets for subsequent rounds. Also common is to make the final round even higher: 2 a "$5/$10/$20" game would allowR$20 bets on the last round only. Another common rule is to allow the larger bet 2 on the second round if there is an "open pair" (that is, at least one player's upcards make a pair). 2 Some casinos (typically in California) use the smaller limit on the first three rounds rather than just the first two.

It 2 is a common convention in stud poker to name the betting rounds after the number of cards each player holds 2 when that betting round begins. So the bet that occurs when each player has three cards is called "third card" 2 or "third street", while the bet that occurs when each player has five cards is "fifth street". The final round, 2 regardless of the number of betting rounds, is commonly called the "river" or simply the "end".

Specific variants [edit]

As 2 mentioned above, seven-card stud is probably the most common form of the game, with most other games being variants of 2 that, although five-card stud is also a basic pattern upon which many variations are built.

Six-card stud [edit]

Six-card stud 2 is usually played as identical to seven-card stud, except that the last face-up round is removed (thus it is two 2 down, three up, one down). With Flip, the last card is dealt face-down, but one of the face-down cards must 2 be flipped face-up. Six-card stud can also be played as 1-4-1, where the first betting round occurs after only two 2 cards are dealt (one down and one up). This latter form more closely resembles five-card stud with an extra downcard.

Razz 2 [edit]

Razz is a variant where the lowest hand wins the pot instead of the highest. Versions differ in 2 the rules for treating straights and flushes as high or low. London Lowball is a popular version that counts straights 2 against the player.

High-low stud [edit]

High-low stud is played using high-low split betting, where the pot is split between 2 the player with the highest hand and the player with the lowest hand. In the most common form, known as 2 "eight-or-better" or "stud eight", an 8-high hand or lower is required to win low. If there is no qualifying low 2 hand, high hand takes the entire pot.

Another form of high-low split stud is played under the same rules as stud 2 eight, but there is no qualifier required for the low half of the pot. Often referred to as Q, it 2 is much less common than stud eight, and is generally played at higher limits.

Mexican stud [edit]

Various forms of 2 roll your own five-card stud, often with a stripped deck and wild cards, are called Mexican stud, Mexican poker, or 2 stud loco. One such variant played by the Casino San Pablo in northern California has these rules: 8s, 9s, and 2 10s are stripped from the deck, and a single joker is added (the deck therefore contains 41 cards). The 7-spot 2 and the J become consecutive, so that 5-6-7-J-Q is a straight. A flush beats a full house (with fewer cards 2 of each suit, they are harder to get). The joker plays as a bug if it is face up, and 2 fully wild if it is face down. The game is played as five-card stud choose-before roll your own. It is 2 usually played with a very high ante, and the high card on the first round pays the bring-in.

The game of 2 Shifting sands is Mexican stud in which each player's hole card (and all others of that rank) are wild for 2 that player only.

Caribbean stud [edit]

Caribbean Stud Poker is a casino game that has been developed using the poker 2 hands and general rules of 5 card stud poker. The game combines poker elements and standard table game elements in 2 that each player dealt into the hand is playing against the dealer. Originally invented by gambling author David Sklansky using 2 the name Casino Holdem with some slight rule variations,[2] the game was first introduced at the Grand Holiday Casino and 2 eventually all the remaining hotels in Aruba in the 1980s.

Miscellaneous [edit]

The game of Chicago is seven-card stud 2 in which the high hand splits the pot with the player who has the highest-ranking spade "in the hole" (among 2 his downcards). There is also Little Chicago (also called Southside), in which the lowest ranking spade in the hole 2 splits the pot; players who play Little Chicago call the high spade variant Big Chicago . This also known as 2 Chicago high by night and Chicago low by night . In Chicago by night the Deuces and One-eyed jacks are 2 usually called as wild cards.

Draft (or "socialist poker") is usually a 2 variant of seven-card stud in which the second and subsequent upcard rounds are dealt this way: for each player remaining, 2 one upcard is dealt to the center of the table (not to any specific player). The player with the worst 2 showing hand gets to choose which of them he will take for his next upcard, then the player with the 2 second-worst showing hand chooses his upcard from those left, and so on, until the player who previously had the best 2 showing hand takes the remaining card. Then betting occurs as normal. In seven-card stud, this makes for three "draft" rounds 2 (the first three cards are dealt normally, as is the final downcard).

Auction is a similar variation in which each upcard round (or 2 possibly just those after the first) begins with an "auction" phase. Instead of dealing each player one upcard, the first 2 card is dealt to the center and all players bid on it; the player who bids the highest amount places 2 that amount into the pot, and then has the right to either keep the auction card as his own upcard, 2 or designate another player who is required to take it as his. Telesina is a stud variant which is played with a stripped "French" deck. The play follows most five card stud games except that after the fourth betting round a 6th community card called the vela card is placed in the center of the table. The vela card may be used by all players to improve their hand after which another round of betting occurs. The standard hand ranking applies with the slight difference in that a flush beats a full house because it is easier to get a full house than a flush. This is because instead of 13 cards per suit there are only 8 having the cards from 2-6 removed.
