Poker television programs had been extremely popular, especially in North America and Europe, following the poker boom. This has especially become the case since the invention of the "pocket cam" in 1997 (and its first use in the United States in 2002), which allows viewers at home to see each player's hole cards. However, viewership has been declining dramatically in recent years, due to laws that restricted online play in the United States.

History [edit]

Poker has been appearing on television somewhat regularly since the late-1970s. In the United States, CBS started airing the final table of the World Series of Poker (WSOP) Main Event as an annual one-hour show around this time and later by ESPN, which were casino-produced shows produced under a time-buy arrangement for sports omnibus programming such as the CBS Sports Spectacular. For many years, the coverage was less than robust because viewers at home could not see what cards the players had or follow their progress visually through graphics. Instead, the coverage essentially involved the commentators guessing what cards the players had in a documentary style production.

In 1997, the hole cam, which allows audiences to see the hidden cards that players held in their hands, was introduced in Europe. The hole cam was patented by WSOP bracelet winner Henry Orenstein and first used in the Late Night Poker television series. It was used again in the inaugural Poker Million tournament in 2000 which boasted the attraction of the first £1,000,000 poker game on live television. By 1996, however, the ESPN one-hour highlight show only included hands that were shown down, so that the commentators, including Gabe Kaplan, could comment, in post-production, on the hands while they were being played out. The commentators referred to this as "taking a peek at the cards", and provided the first contemporary announcing on hands during the play in poker history. By 2001, however, Late Night Poker had been cancelled in the UK and televised poker could no longer be found in Europe. In the US, the 1999, 2000, and 2001 World Series of Poker events were only broadcast in one-hour documentaries on the Discovery Networks.

In 1999, documentary filmmaker Steven Lipscomb produced and directed a documentary on the WSOP for the Discovery Channel. It was the first U.S. poker production funded entirely by a television network rather than the casino. When the 1999 WSOP aired, it doubled its audience over the hour time slot. Seeing the audience reaction, Lipscomb believed there was an untapped market and began pitching poker series ideas to cable and network television. Because poker had been on the air for over twenty years, with little viewer interest, broadcasters were unwilling to commit resources to put a series on the air.

In October 2001, Lipscomb wrote a business plan. Along with poker player Mike Sexton and poker business woman Linda Johnson, Lipscomb approached casino mogul and avid poker player, Lyle Berman, whose company Lakes Entertainment agreed to fund the World Poker Tour (WPT)—the first organized and televised tour of poker tournaments in the world.

In June 2002, WPT filmed its first episode at Bellagio in Las Vegas. Wanting to create a compelling, action-packed show, WPT took eight months to edit the first WPT episode. ESPN, who resumed their coverage of the World Series of Poker in 2002, featured pocket cam technology in their return broadcast—albeit, in a very limited capacity—prior to the WPT's first show.

During this time, the "WPT Format" was created featuring the WPT hole cam, interactive graphics and "live sports feel". These new features put viewers into the minds and at the heart of the action. The first WPT episode aired on March 30, 2003, on the Travel Channel and became an instant success (the highest rated show in network history).

A few months later, ESPN's broadcast of the 2003 World Series of Poker adopted many features characteristic of the emerging WPT series, with an improved graphic display detailing the exciting action of the Main Event's final table. This coupled with the unlikely outcome in the 2003 WSOP Main Event—where Tennessee accountant Chris Moneymaker won $2.5 million after winning his seat through a $39 PokerStars satellite tournament—and the ensuing publicity only further sparked the already accelerated interest in the game initiated by the WPT.

These events are considered the main contributor to poker's booming popularity—increasing the number of entrants into live poker tournaments (at all levels), the growth of online poker and the overall greater interest in the game—but above all others, the 2003 World Series of Poker Main Event (and subsequent broadcast on ESPN) is most cited as poker's Tipping Point; commonly referred to as the "Moneymaker Effect".

Poker gained further exposure in Canada and much of the United States as a result of the 2004-05 NHL lockout, which caused sports networks in both countries to air poker as replacement programming for their NHL coverage.[citation needed]

The much improved ratings of poker television programs from this point on lead to ESPN covering many more events of the World Series of Poker (in addition to the Main Event as in the past) since 2003, as well as covering some other tournaments outside of the World Series, such as the United States Poker Championship. Since its first broadcast, WPT has also expanded its tour stops from 12 events at seven casino partner locations to 23 domestic and international tournaments and 14 casino partners in Season VI.

Since the introduction of the hole cam and WPT television format, poker has become almost ubiquitous in the US and Europe. While poker originally aired on sports channels such as ESPN and Sky Sports has expanded to such "non traditional" networks as Bravo and GSN. All poker television programs make heavy use of the aforementioned pocket cam and television format, plus generally feature a "straightman" and a "comedian" type of commentators, with one often being a professional poker player.

With the ability to edit a tournament that lasts days into just a few hours, ESPN's World Series of Poker broadcasts generally focus on showing how various star players fared in each event. Key hands from throughout the many days of each year's WSOP Main Event are shown, and similar highly edited coverage of final tables is also provided. For the events in the WSOP before the Main Event, only the final table is covered in television coverage, similar to how the Main Event was televised before ESPN's airing of the 2003 World Series Main Event.

The World Poker Tour does not offer general coverage of the multi-day poker tournaments. Instead, the WPT covers only the action at the final table of each event. With aggressive play and increasing blinds and antes, the important action from a single table can easily be edited into a two-hour episode. Although the tournament fate of fewer stars are chronicled this way, it allows the drama to build more naturally toward the final heads up showdown.

Although most poker shows on television focus on tournaments, High Stakes Poker shows a high-stakes cash game. In this game professional and amateur players play no limit Texas Hold'em with their own money (the minimum to enter the game is R$100,000). This game has allowed spectators to observe differences between cash games and tournaments, and to see how players adjust their play to the different format.[1]

Poker's growth in Europe led to the creation of two FTA channels: The Poker Channel and Pokerzone. Both began broadcasting during 2005.

Televised poker experienced a sudden disruption in 2011 after the lawsuit United States v. Scheinberg et al. was filed. Two of the defendants in that case, PokerStars and Full Tilt Poker, were the primary sponsors of most of the shows that were airing on American television at the time.[2] Since it was discovered that online gambling (other than sports betting) was not illegal and the state law used to file the lawsuit was not applicable to foreign companies, the lawsuit was resolved in 2012, with the two companies merging and without any admission of guilt.

Although once popular, poker television programs have steadily been losing their audience and never fully recovered from the disruption caused by the Scheinberg lawsuit. ESPN is on contract to show World Series of Poker programming through 2024, though viewership has dropped dramatically since the early boom.

The over-the-top content platform PokerGO was launched in 2024 and is based in Las Vegas, Nevada.[3] It is a subscription-based streaming service specializing in poker content including cash games, tournaments, and documentaries.[4] PokerGO streamed the World Series of Poker from 2024 to 2024 in partnership with ESPN, before CBS Sports became the new domestic television partner in 2024.[5]

In December 2024 on YouTube-based Hustler Casino Live, the biggest pot in televised U.S. poker broadcast history was set. The No-Limit Hold'em cash game had stakes of R$200/$400/$800/$1,600 and Alan Keating would win the R$1,158,000 pot with a flush against "Handz".[6]

In February 2024 on PokerGO's No Gamble, No Future Cash of the Titans, Patrik Antonius would win a R$1,978,000 pot with two pair against Eric Persson to break the record set on Hustler Casino Live.[7] Following that record-breaking pot, there were three pots that also amounted to larger than the previous record pot that was set on Hustler Casino Live.[8][9]

Poker television programs [edit]

Here is a list of poker television programs that have aired on television in either North America or Europe.

North America [edit]

1 ESPN did not air the WSOP in 1996 or 1999–2001; The Discovery Channel did air one-hour specials of the 2000 & 2001 Main Events

2 World Series of Poker bracelets events and select coverage of the Main Event have streamed on exclusively on PokerGO from 2024 onwards.

3 In 2024, CBS Sports became the new domestic television partner for the WSOP alongside PokerGO.

Europe [edit]

E e,

No topo de cada edição do Washington Post está a afirmação "A democracia morre na escuridão". Mas e se o próprio editor for um mestre das artes escuras? Eu experimentei, pix sportsbet primeira mão as técnicas jornalísticas que Sir William Lewis (editor-chefe) da editora no The New York Times.

Jeff Lewis e Robert Winnett, que foi nomeado por ele como editor do Washington Post antes de decidir rapidamente não assumir o emprego são acusados de beneficiar dos investigadores privados quem infringiu a lei. Como essas alegações recentes aparecem na superfície "uma verdade alternativa" está sendo informado sobre os resultados negativos das notícias publicadas em jornais britânicos no ano passado Recentemente descobri como Lewis tentou me acusar de um crime que não cometi. Ele foi perguntado pela polícia metropolitana por quê, em 2010-2011 o News Group havia ordenado a exclusão dos milhões de emails do grupo; eram os emails da Polícia para as investigações sobre hacking telefônico: O Grupo Murdoch continua afirmando ter sido excluído "por razões comerciais ou práticas". Mas quando eles foram confrontados pelo jogo Reka (que era uma das coisas mais importantes), ele disse ao executivo Brookh no momento seguinte Sua explicação admitiu que o ladrão tinha sido supostamente roubado para impedir a sua visão. Em uma entrevista com as autoridades em 8 de julho 2011, ele tentou me culpar explicando à polícia, dizendo-lhe ter recebido informações sobre este "Eu estava definitivamente enviado ao Tom Watson... um membro da equipe na época", conspirando roubar esses emails". A equipa Murdoch sugeriu eu havia subornado os seus ex funcionários assim como nós já tínhamos alguns dos documentos disponíveis "Nós recebemos avisos do pessoal." A policial Sue Akers, que liderou a investigação inicial da polícia de Nova York e chefou o inquérito original disse agora ter achado uma explicação para Lewis.

Inacreditável.

Tendo apresentado esta nova evidência à polícia metropolitana em maio, fui informado de que a...

A equipe de investigação especial da Met, que fica sob o comando central do crime especialista em crimes vai investigar isso ainda mais. (A News UK respondeu: "é fortemente negado a notícia internacional procurar impedir ou pior esconder evidências das investigações dos met".)

Embora Lewis sempre tenha afirmado que era o Sr. Clean Up, essas novas alegações apontam para um encobrimento: os e-mails destruídos provavelmente teriam revelado muito mais da intrusão do News Group na vida privada de milhares de pessoas inocentes – não menos comuns famílias atingidas pela tragédia - quase certamente teria acrescentado ao que eu descobri recentemente sobre meu passado perante a morte das vítimas dos crimes cometidos por mim mesmo (veja abaixo).

Eu sei há algum tempo que eu sabia o grupo Murdoch tinha acessado informações sobre minha hipoteca da sociedade do meu edifício, havia projetado reverso de engenharia no número telefone meus e falsificada a voz para garantir as minhas Informações Pessoais pessoais ao advogado. E pagou um investigador invadir os computadores nacionais policiais (um médico admitiu ter sido

Mas até hoje não sei quem foi o responsável por esses roubos.

Mais recentemente, recebi informações alegando que:

que o grupo Murdoch também pagou aos investigadores para invadir outras contas pessoais minhas – incluindo:

Banco, Gás e

A equipe de Murdoch sempre afirmou que a busca – não apenas por mim, mas também pela minha família - era do interesse público. Mas agora está claro para nós como uma "expedição da pesca" e é evidente o fato disso ser um processo pessoal sem ter sido feito pix sportsbet nome dos interesses públicos ou das pessoas envolvidas na investigação no caso concreto".

E o que estava por trás dos extremos a extremo ao qual Murdoch's News Group de Mudrud foi para subverter as leis? Foi muito além do desejo jornalístico publicar uma série sensacional histórias. O grupo da Dow Mordosh não só tinha motivos políticos, mas desenhos comerciais e isso ia longe demais tentando obter 100% controle sobre Sky TV Em vários momentos ele planejava comprar ITV; também era necessário neutralizar os (por exemplo: cortando-se taxa licença), terminando seu site na internet ou tirando eventos esportivos nacionais gratuitos).

Marchando sob a bandeira de uma imprensa livre, o Grupo News do Murdoch violou os direitos individuais à vida privada pix sportsbet escala industrial desde as famílias das Milly Dowler e Madeleine McCann até às vítimas dos atentados terroristas que atingiram julho 2005, invadindo-as no momento da maior dor. E como sabemos nos procedimentos judiciais desta semana há evidências...

de tirar o fôlego pix sportsbet seu alcance e intensidade. Contamos com nossos jornalistas para lançar luz sobre as áreas mais escuras – nos maravilhar, não cometer crimes inovadores por conta própria; Durante esses tempos desafiadores do jornalismo impresso a resposta aos problemas financeiros dos jornais é operar na borda da lei mas seguir uma bússola moral clara: sem ética nunca brilhará através das trevas!

Gordon Brown é embaixador global da ONU para a educação e foi primeiro-ministro do Reino Unido de 2007 até 2010.
