Administration Biden announces new commercial measures against companies and organizations in various countries

The Biden administration announced on Friday that it will add more than 100 companies and organizations in Russia, China and other countries to a restricted trade list and take other measures, to expand the Bet365 Spaceman network to try to capture more advanced technology that is flowing to the Russian military forces.

The new rules aim to disarticulate the networks of acquisition that are sending semiconductors and other technologies to the Russian forces, which use them to wage war against Ukraine. They will give the US government expanded authority to prevent products made with US technology from being sent to Russia, even if those products are manufactured in other countries.

The penalties also include the addition of 123 entities in Russia, Crimea, China, Turkey, Iran and Cyprus to a list called "entity list". Suppliers are prohibited from sending companies on the list of entities certain products without first obtaining a license from the government.

The government also added certain locations in Hong Kong and Turkey to the list that are known for configuring companies as shell companies, which means that any company registered in those locations will face commercial restrictions.
