Coreia do Sul: Relato do Governo Confirma Métodos Coercitivos na Adoção de Crianças

Por décadas, a Coreia do Sul tem sido conhecida como o maior "exportador de bebês" do mundo, enviando centenas de milhares de crianças para o exterior após o país ser devastado pela guerra e muitas mães se encontrarem desamparadas.

Muitos desses filhos adotados, agora adultos espalhados pelo globo e tentando rastrear suas origens, acusam agências de corrupção e má prática, inclusive space man f12 bet alguns casos, retirando-os à força de suas mães.

Um relatório divulgado esta semana por uma comissão do governo sul-coreano apoia essas alegações e descobre novas evidências sobre os métodos coercitivos empregados para forçar mães a ceder seus filhos.

A Comissão pela Verdade e Reconciliação, incumbida space man f12 bet 2024 para investigar as alegações, descobriu que mais de uma dúzia de bebês space man f12 bet several instalações governamentais financiadas de cuidados na década de 1980 haviam sido retirados à força para agências de adoção, algumas vezes "no dia do nascimento ou no dia seguinte."

Elas examinaram três instalações de cuidados nas cidades de Daegu e Sejong onde, space man f12 bet 1985 e 1986, 20 crianças no total foram transferidas para agências de adoção. A maioria dessas crianças foi adotada para fora dos Estados Unidos, Austrália, Noruega e Dinamarca.

"As circunstâncias confirmam as instalações forçando mães a ceder seus direitos paternos", disse a comissão space man f12 bet um comunicado, marcando uma vitória amarga para adotados que procuraram por décadas responsabilizar o governo.

A comissão ainda está investigando casos supostamente envolvendo documentação falsificada. Um relatório interino deve ser publicado mais tarde este ano.

Mais de 200 mil crianças sul-coreanas foram adotadas para fora desde os anos 1950 após a Segunda Guerra Mundial e a Guerra da Coreia, de acordo com as autoridades. Muitas dessas crianças foram adotadas por famílias nos EUA e Europa.

Embora as adoções continuem hoje, a tendência tem vindo diminuindo desde os anos 2010 após a Coreia do Sul alterar suas leis de adoção space man f12 bet um esforço para abordar problemas sistêmicos e reduzir o número de crianças adotadas para fora.

Para uma geração de adotados que cresceram space man f12 bet populações majoritariamente brancas e homogêneas, alguns dizem sentir-se desconectados de suas raízes coreanas e incapazes de se encaixar. É o que motivou a procura pelas suas famílias biológicas.

Alguns desses adotados dizem terem emoções mistas sobre as descobertas da comissão, sentindo horror e esperança de que a investigação irá esclarecer o que muitos suspeitavam há muito tempo.

"É verdadeiramente aterrorizante ouvir como sistemáticas essas questões foram, mas não diria que é necessariamente surpreendente", disse Susanné Seong-eun Bergsten, que foi adotada da Coreia do Sul e cresceu na Suécia.

A família biológica de Bergsten a encontrou quando ela era jovem adulta, e embora não haja sinais de que space man f12 bet documentação tenha sido falsificada, ela diz que pode entender as lutas, tendo sido envolvida space man f12 bet advocacia por adotados coreanos.

"Nós, os adotados, somos todos essencialmente contados, essas adoções são para o nosso próprio bem e deveríamos nos sentir gratos por escapar da pobreza", disse ela, chamando a realidade de "muito mais complexa".

"Nossos documentos de adoção geralmente carecem de informações importantes que poderiam nos dar mais contexto para a adoção, como nosso fundo cultural, estigma e as lutas individuais que nossos pais enfrentaram na era pós-guerra", disse ela.

Mark Zastrow, um adotado coreano que foi criado nos EUA, disse que as descobertas foram um "marco importante".

"[Isso] valida o que adotados coreanos sabemos há décadas space man f12 bet nossa comunidade: A narrativa de que mães coreanas escolheram de seu próprio livre-arbítrio entregar seus filhos é, space man f12 bet muito
